west papua hardly ever makes the news in the country where i live new zealand when it does it is generally for unhappy reasons as i was putting the finishing touches on my edit of marthen medlama s manuscript there was a report on our national radio station of seven young west papuans being arrested on the very serious charge of treason for waving the morning star flag and for shouting in favour of west papuan independence as i listened thanks to this book i felt i understood we are in a phase of history where much of the world is acknowledging and atoning for the sins of colonialism yet parts of the world have not finished with colonising for better or for worse so far for the west papuans for the worse the dutch territories on new guinea island were handed to indonesia in a backroom deal brokered by the us in the 1960s it can hardly be a coincidence that even before the ink was dry american interests were joining with the indonesian government to exploit the vast mineral resources of west papua so while most former colonial powers are wringing their hands over their self interested exploitation of their sometime colonies and the terrible harm done they are turning a blind eye as the same wrong is perpetrated in the present day it is past time for the world to start paying attention to what is happening in west papua

all over the world and throughout millennia states have attempted to subjugate control and dominate non state populations and to end their wars this book compares such processes of pacification leading to the end of tribal warfare in seven societies from all over the world between the 19th and 21st centuries it shows that pacification cannot be understood solely as a unilateral imposition of state control but needs to be approached as the result of specific interactions between state actors and non state local groups indigenous groups usually had options in deciding between accepting and resisting state control state actors often had to make concessions or form alliances with indigenous groups in order to pursue their goals incentives given to local groups sometimes played a more important role in ending warfare than repression in this way indigenous groups in interaction with state actors strongly shaped the character of the process of pacification this volume s comparison finds that pacification is more successful and more durable where state actors mainly focus on selective incentives for local groups to renounce warfare offer protection and only as a last resort use moderate repression combined with the quick establishment of effective institutions for peaceful conflict what is an appropriate theoretical approach to criminology in the third world this book makes an argument for cultural specificity and the development of a cultural criminology appropriate to a particular country it contains original criminological studies that apply these notions to papua new guinea where law and order problems are rife especially gang violence a major strength of the volume is the inter disciplinary authorship which include stanley cohen marilyn strathern cyndi banks sinclair dineen henry ivarature adam reed karen sykes richard sikani and tony crook these distinguished criminologists and anthropologists contribute studies of crime and social issues in papua new guinea based on their original research the book has chapters on the melanesian conception and meaning of violence street begging in port moresby drug control raskol criminal gangs education and the problem of youth the prison experience for a melanesian dispute settlement between mining companies and villagers state responses to violence through the criminal justice system and informal approaches to the resolution of crime including the surrender of criminal gangs the collection emphasises that third world criminology has been marginalised by being subsumed in the western discourse on crime as professor stanley cohen writes in the preface it is a measure of the continuing ethnocentricity of western dominated criminology that a volume of this sort under this title is still necessary addresses the conflict contradictions and ambiguities that are often encountered in field research in this book historical narratives chart how people created forms of agriculture in the highlands of new guinea and how these practices were transformed through time the intention is twofold to clearly establish new guinea as a region of early agricultural development and plant domestication and to develop a contingent practice based interpretation of early agriculture that has broader application to other regions of the world the multi disciplinary record from the highlands has the potential to challenge and change long held assumptions regarding early agriculture globally which are usually based on domestication early agriculture in the highlands is charted by an exposition of the practices of plant exploitation and cultivation practices are ontologically prior because they ultimately produce the phenotypic and genotypic changes in plant species characterised as domestication as well as the social and environmental transformations associated with agriculture they are also methodologically prior because they emplace plants in specific historico geographic contexts
